Tennessee Board of Boiler Rules Elects Chairman

Eddie Lunn Named to Head The State Boiler Board

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (September 29, 2004) – Eddie Lunn, Jr., President and CEO of Boiler Supply Company headquartered in Nashville, Tenn., was unanimously elected chairman of the Board of Boiler Rules for the Tennessee Department of Labor and Workforce Development, at their 2nd Annual Tennessee Boiler Inspector conference last week in Gatlinburg, Tennessee.

“For nearly 30 years Mr. Lunn has successfully grown the boiler sales and service company that his father started. He brings a keen business mind and sound leadership skills to the board,” said Martin Toth, Chief Boiler Inspector, State of Tennessee. “We are very glad that Mr. Lunn has agreed to lead the Boiler Board for the State of Tennessee.”

The responsibility of the Board of Boiler Rules is to protect the citizens of the State of Tennessee from the potential hazards involved in the operation of boiler and pressure vessels within the State. The Board of Boiler Rules also licenses boiler repair companies to repair boilers and pressure vessels that are within the State. Throughout the nation there are over 150 repair companies licensed to repair boilers and pressure vessels in Tennessee.

Lunn was appointed to serve on the Boiler Board in January 1981. Today he is the senior member of the board and will replace Bob Elliott of Tennessee Eastman, who has retired.
